(1) This weighted average maturity calculation uses the SEC Rule 2a-7 definition for stated maturity for any floating rate instrument held in the portfolio to determine the weighted average maturity for the pool. This Rule specifies that a variable rate instruction to be paid in 397 calendar days or less shall be deemed to have a maturity equal to the period remaining until the next readjustment of the interest rate. (2) This weighted average maturity calculation uses the final maturity of any floating rate instruments $held\ in\ the\ portfolio\ to\ calculate\ the\ weighted\ average\ maturity\ for\ the\ pool.$

ECONOMIC COMMENTARY

Market review

August proved that we are not in a recession just yet, although economic data continued to show the economy losing steam despite sustained strength in the labor market. Investors continued to weigh the risks of high inflation and slowing growth while looking to the Federal Reserve (Fed) for any indication of future interest rate policy. Signs of broad-based weaking in the economy remained evident as soaring inflation, supply constraints, rising interest rates and growing uncertainty about the economic outlook have weighed on activity. While real consumer spending rose~0.2% month-over-month (m/m) in July and in line with pre-pandemic standards, it came in short of expectations for the month. Flash August manufacturing and services purchasing managers' indices (PMIs) confirmed the widespread weakening in the economy, with both indicators decreasing relative to July. The manufacturing PMI declined to 51.3 from 52.2 and the services PMI plunged to 44.2 from 47.3. New home sales fell 12.6% in July and are down 29.6% year-over-year (y/y), as housing affordability challenged homebuyers. The median price of new homes was up 5.9% m/m, and the 30-year fixed mortgage rate climbed above 5.50%. Positively, inflation showed signs of softening but remained well above the Fed's 2% target. Both the July CPI and PCE reports were cooler than expected. Headline CPI was unchanged (consensus +0.2% m/m) while core CPI (ex-food and energy) rose 0.3% m/m (consensus +0.5%). From a year ago, headline CPI inflation fell from 9.1% y/y in June to 8.5% in July, while core CPI was unchanged from June, rising 5.9%. The monthly decline in inflation was driven by a fall in energy prices, airfares, and used vehicle prices. Other areas of inflation remained hot, however, including a 1.1% increase in food prices and a 0.6% rise in owners' equivalent rent. The headline PCE price index edged down -0.1% m/m in July from a 1% increase in June, driven by falling energy prices, while the core PCE index rose by just 0.1% m/m from 0.6% in June bringing the y/y increase downgo 4.6% from 4.8% previously. ECONOMIC COMMENTARY (cont.)

At the highly anticipated Fed's annual Economic Policy Symposium in Jackson Hole, Chairman Powell's speech was hawkish and emphasized the Fed's resolve to bring down inflation. "Restoring price stability will likely require a restrictive policy stance for quite some time." Notably, he pushed back on the market's view that the Fed would begin easing policy next year. Powell emphasized that "the historical record cautions strongly again prematurely loosening policy," referencing the summary of economic projections (SEP) dot plots for 2023 when discussing the longer-run policy outlook. He candidly spoke about the cost of reducing inflation bringing "some pain" for businesses and households but said that failure to restore price stability will mean "far greater pain." While he did not provide guidance regarding the magnitude of the September rate hike, he indicated that another unusually large increase at the next meeting may be appropriate but will be dependent on upcoming data between now and then. Meanwhile, employment remained a bright spot, showing few signs of weakening. Weekly jobless claims, which had been slowly rising since March, peaked at 262,000 at the beginning of August, the highest level since November, before declining to 232,000 for the week ending August 27.

The July JOLTs report showed a 605,000 decline in job openings – the most in over 2 years. Despite the drop, it is still very much a worker's market. Job openings remained elevated at 11.2 million. There are still almost two job openings for every one unemployed person in the U.S., a stat the Fed has referenced when characterizing the current labor markets as "out of balance." The July jobs report was much stronger than expected with payrolls rising by a revised 526,000 (more than double the consensus estimate of +250,000); and the unemployment rate falling to 3.5%. With this report, the U.S. labor market hit two notable milestones, having recovered all the payroll jobs lost in the pandemic recession and achieving the lowest unemployment rate (3.46% to two decimals) since May 1969.

August's employment report showed still solid job growth with a slight tick down in earnings and a modest rise in the unemployment rate driven by a healthy increase in the labor force. Nonfarm payrolls rose by 315,000. While gains were broad-based across the economy, the payroll increase was slightly less impressive following downward revisions of a cumulative -107,000 to the prior two months. Employment as measured by the household survey rose by a very strong 442,000. However, this was dwarfed by an unexpected but welcome 786,000 surge in the labor force, which cause the unemployment rate to increase from 3.5% to 3.7%. Overall, this report provides the economy with more runway for a soft landing, showing continued employment momentum along with a little more slack in the labor market, reducing economy-wide inflation pressures. In this environment, front end Treasury yields surged. The three-month Treasury bill yield increased 56 bs to end the month at 2.93%; the six-month Treasury bill yield rose 48 bps to end at 3.35%; and the 12-month Treasury bill yield increased 57 bps to end the month at 3.51%.

Outlook

Jackson Hole allowed the Fed to clarify its prioritization of risks and policy responses. No mention was made of employment. Inflation is the priority, then growth, and then markets. Despite the current strength in the labor market, there are signs that the huge excess demand for labor is easing. However, at a time when talk of recession dominates most conversations, the continued strength in the labor market provides strong support to Chairman Powell's assertion that the economy is not in recession at this time. Despite some softening in the July CPI print, the Federal Reserve still has a long way to go to bring inflation back to its 2.00% target. While investors were hopeful for dovish signals at Jackson Hole, they were forced to readjust their summer expectations from a dovish pivot to a Fed strategy of "hike and hold" next year. Accordingly, markets are now pricing in a 70% likelihood of a 75-bps hike in September. Expectations for rate cuts in 2023 were pushed back, as markets brace for a "higher rates for longer" environment. The only real certainty is that Fed remains laser focused on taming inflation and is willing to sacrifice some softness in the economy and labor market to do so. We continue to expect a 75-bp rate hike in September, followed by a 50-bps hike in November and a 25-bps hike in December, bringing the year-end federal funds rate range to 3.75-4.00%.
